

2nd April 2004 (Friday) 6-9pm

Venue: Singapore Art Museum Glass Hall
Free admission

Nature Photography and its impact on the conservation of wildlife

In this talk, Joe and Mary Ann McDonald will share their experiences and excitement of their expeditions; and their worries of the threat of a diminishing natural habitat caused by rapid development, through their captured images. They are particularly concerned about the future of the magnificent game parks in Africa and they will outline in the talk, how photographers can have an impact on the conservation process by highlighting these issues with their photos.

Introduction of McDonald

Joe and Mary Ann McDonald, are top-rated, major prize-winning professional wildlife photographers from the USA. They have been actively photographing nature in the wild, various nature reserves and parks in Rwanda, Tanzania, Kenya in Africa, Chile and the Falkland Islands in and around South America and in many places in the USA.

Organiser:

Nature
Photographic
Society (S)

Sponsors:

Event website: <http://www.naturephotosociety.org.sg/ASP/JoeMcDonaldWorkshop>

Registration forms can be obtained from Cathay Photo, Anthony's Collections, The Camera Workshop, Ruby Photo, or downloaded from the event website.

Should you have any enquiry, please feel free to send us an email at: membership@naturephotosociety.org.sg